NEW YORK JUDGE STRIKES GOVERNOR’S PLAN TO LIMIT NONPROFIT EXECUTIVE PAY

A New York State judge struck down a 2012 executive order by Gov. Andrew Cuomo that capped executive compensation at $199,000 at nonprofits that receive a significant amount of state money. Ruling on a lawsuit pursued by Professional Agencies for Children’s Therapy Services, Justice Thomas Feinman said the governor had crossed the line by enacting rules that the legislature had previously rejected. A spokeswoman for Attorney General Eric Schneiderman said the state planned to appeal the ruling.
